The fantastic world depicted in A Night of Serious Drinking is actually the ordinary world turned upside down. The characters are called the Anthographers, Fabricators of useless objects, Scienters, Nibblists, Clarificators, and other absurd titles. Yet the inhabitants of these strange realms are only too familiar: scientists dissecting an animal in their laboratory, a wise man surrounded by his devotees, politicians, poets expounding their rhetoric. These characters perform hilarious antics and intellectual games, which they see as serious attempts to find meaning and freedom.

Excerpt: Nausea (orig. French La Nausee) is an epistolary novel by the existentialist philosopher Jean-Paul Sartre, published in 1938 and written while he was teaching at the lycee of Le Havre. This is Sartre's first novel and one of his best-known. The novel concerns a dejected historian in a town similar to Le Havre, who becomes convinced that...

The breeze continued to blow, uninvited, into the room. And along with its coldness, came soft footsteps..... An intruder, a man, with his ice-blue coat, created a long shadow, which fell against the wall of the room. He surveyed the surroundings, making certain nothing was lurking in the confinement of the four walls, nothing that could interrupt what he was about to do... Charles Howard Schmid - AKA the Pied Piper of Tucson - had quickly tired of being the object of ridicule and cruel jokes. He KNEW he was a real ladies man - and was going to prove it from now on. March 31, 1965, after a night of serious drinking, he proclaimed that he was going to kill a girl and get away with it. His victim, a 15-year-old girl, was lured to the desert where he raped and killed her. And that was just the beginning... Based on a true story, BLEEDING HEARTS is an in depth peek into the mind of a real life Romeo - and murderer.

Praised for his independence, curiosity, intimate knowledge of French literature, and sharp reader's eye, John Taylor is a writer-critic who is naturally skeptical of literary fashions, overnight reputations, and readymade academic categories. Here he examines various genres of politically committed literature (such as Jean Hatzfeld's "narratives" about Rwanda or Tchicaya U Tam'si's verse), some overlooked fiction, and several provocative experiments with literary form (ranging from the poetry of Jean-Paul Michel and Marie etienne to the "three-line novels" of Felix Feneon).Taylor continues to reveal the remarkable resourcefulness of French writing. Besides drawing attention to authors (like Dai Sijie or Albert Cossery) who have come to French from other languages, he has added younger novelists to his critical panorama.Challenging persistent cliches and recovering deserving voices from unjust neglect, Taylor's vision of French literature conjures up the image of a vital nexus. Poetry crisscrosses with prose, writers from one generation meet up with those from the next or the previous one, while the philosophical ideas underlying French writing are scrutinized. This is an essential guide to the realities of French culture today.

A memoir about falling in love with New York City and learning how to love. Enveloped in the restaurants, streets, and museums of 2008 New York, a lusty bodhisattva sings his love song to the paradise that he soon must abandon to help his autistic son. A search for the now and for a lost kiss, the crisis of aging, a paean to the ineffable, and a spiritual transformation, with stylistic hints of Daumal's Night of Serious Drinking, Calvino's Invisible Cities, Jerome's Three Men in a Boat, Jung, classical music, and bewitching but faltering coming-of-age memories. All mingled with what's most beautiful about living in New York.
