1. Roof Edges. This is a very common way for rats to get in your cavity walls, especially if you have overhanging trees next to your property. Rats can easily climb trees and as soon as they get onto your home, they will look for a weakness to exploit to gain entry.. The joint between your roof and walls is likely to have some gaps in that are big enough to fit a rat in.

Local authorities have encouraged the hunting and killing of Burmese pythons through bounties. Hunters are paid a flat rate of $8.10 an hour, but they also get a bounty based on the size of the snake they capture. Hunters get paid $50 for a 4-foot snake, plus $25 for each extra foot. So, a 10-foot Burmese python could earn a hunter $200.
