Infant/Toddler Observation. First of all I should point out the physical state of the child. He was very active, curious, and reacted adequately to his age group in various life situations during the observation. The child was in a good mood, he smiled; there were no signs of probable illness which could be noticed in such a short period of time. The boy was in a good mood, didn't behave capriciously.

The observation model was an adjusted version of the Tavistock Model for studying infants. The original model observes a baby, an hour a week for the first one or two years of life, within the family home (Fawcett 2009). The observer does not take notes, as it allows them to notice all behaviours, movements and expressions of the child.
